

Children and babies idioms

As soon as I let her take the Porsche for a test drive she was ready to throw her money at me. It was like taking _____ from a baby.

Justin's not happy, when I explained he would have to share his office with the new starter he threw his _____ out of the pram.

I agree that we need a new website but let's not throw out the _____ with the bathwater. The content's okay but we do need a new design.

The grammar section is the hardest part of the test, compared to that the rest is child's _____.

She loves English fashion, when she visited London last year she was like a _____ in a candy store.

I was shattered after the conference but I slept like a _____ last night and I feel fantastic this morning.

I'm the new kid on the _____, I've only been here a month but I'm settling in well and enjoying the job so far.

Look at him scoffing that pie. He takes after his father, doesn't he?

- He sure does, the _____ didn't fall far from the tree with that one.

apple baby play toys block candy baby kid
--

Can you think of any situations where you could use some of these idioms?

Do you have any similar idioms in your own language?