

Legal idioms

It seems clear cut that Jones is guilty of this terrible crime but the law says you are innocent until proven _____ and the justice system must do its work.

That new PA is beginning to annoy me, he insists that we do everything by the _____ and it's really slowing things down.

I know you're unhappy Ms. Ramos but if you read the fine _____ you will see that you are not entitled to a refund if the package has been opened.

Streaming movies from the internet is a legal gray _____, it hasn't been determined yet whether any particular law is being broken.

Because he died without leaving a will, the majority of the inheritance is expected to go to his next of _____.

I used to be a bit of a bad boy, a gangster, but I went to jail and did my time. I've paid my _____ to society.

In this country, there's a lot of red _____ involved in opening a restaurant. I must have filled out 100 forms before we got all the right licenses.

The policeman must have recognised me from the TV, he turned a blind _____ to my speeding and let me off with a warning.

The _____ is out as to whether these new virtual reality headsets will be a hit or a flop like 3D televisions.

eye debt jury guilty area tape book kin print
--

Can you think of a situation where you could use some of these idioms?