

Memory idioms

Oh drat! I meant to go to the chemist but it completely slipped my _____.

I'm sorry, my mind's gone _____. What was your name again?

Oh, I know this song. What's it called? It's on the tip of my _____.

It's no use, I'll never remember all these things. I've got a memory like a _____.

I've told him a thousand times to close the window before he leaves, but it just goes in one _____ and out the other.

Please _____ in mind that other guests may be sleeping and keep the noise down to a reasonable level.

Police have made a sketch of the wanted man in the hope that it will jog someone's _____.

You say your teacher's name is Howard Jones? Hmm, the name rings a _____.

Don't worry, I won't forget. I've got a memory like an _____.

elephant bell tongue ear mind blank bear sieve memory
--

Can you think of any situations where you could use some of these idioms?