

Weather idioms

We usually like to stay close to home for my holidays but this year we're going to throw _____ to the wind and spend some time in Turkey.

It's quiet now but the students will be here for lunch very soon. This is just the _____ before the storm.

Haley was feeling a bit under the _____ so I told her to go home and get some rest.

I was already to tell everyone about my new job in Singapore and then Sally stole my _____ by announcing she was getting married.

The camping trip has been cancelled, but every _____ has a silver lining, I can go to the football on Saturday now.

The newspapers are making far too much of this story about my disagreement with the President. It's a _____ in a teacup and will soon blow over.

The Dollar is very strong against the Euro at the moment. It's my recommendation to make _____ while the sun shines and book that European holiday now.

I think it will be safe to go on another cruise, after all, _____ never strikes twice.

thunder   caution   hay   weather   cloud   lightning   calm   storm
---

Can you think of any situations where you could use some of these idioms?

Do you have any similar idioms in your own language?